Attention, Wal-Mart campers: St. Albert considers rollback

► St. Albert city council votes to consider restrictions on overnight stays in store parking lots ► Focus is Wal-Mart in north end of city

Campers who like to stop for the night at a Wal-Mart parking lot may not be able to do such a thing so easily next summer in St. Albert.

The city is looking at ways to place restrictions on staying overnight in store parking lots. Mayor Nolan Crouse brought forward the motion to look into tightening up bylaws last week.

"His concern seems to be this is something that could grow and (could) become an issue for the community," Coun. Malcolm Parker said yesterday.

Crouse is concerned about the unsightly view, as well as the fact the city has campground space available.

Most Wal-Mart stores in North America allow overnight stays, though there are websites listing individual stores and municipalities that don't.

"We're still allowing RVs, that's as far as I'll say," a St. Albert store spokesperson said yesterday.

Parker said he would have to hear a good reason why campers shouldn't be able to set up before voting to ban overnight parking, but he is interested in restricting those that tend to stay longer.

City resident Jeanne, who didn't want to give her last name, said she has camped in Wal-Mart lots across the U.S.

"But to be here consistently is not cool," she said, pointing to one RV that she says has been parked at the Wal-Mart all winter.

But to others, it doesn't matter.

"When you're driving down the main road, you don't really see them," said shopper Laurie Roehr.

Wait for decision

- City administration has until next February to return with a recommendation.
- Research needs to be done on the best way to regulate, said Coun. Malcolm Parker, listing officer enforcement or permits from the store itself as possible options.
- Yesterday, two RVs and a truck with a trailer, as well as a couple of vehicles for sale, could be seen in the parking lot.

► Students joined parents, trustees and politicians yesterday during a rally at the Alberta legislature grounds against proposed education cuts. The message of the rally, organized by the Holyrood School Council, was for the government to increase and ensure stable funding for education across the province. Story, page 4.

There could be a longer wait for mail as Canada Post staffers get closer to a strike today.

Bev Ray, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) Edmonton Local, said she has a conference call this morning with the union's national board of directors and other chapter presidents to determine the next steps.

"There could be two outcomes, either a complete strike or a rotating strike," Ray said of what would happen if postal workers walk off the job this week.

Issues of contention for the unionized workers include sick leave, starting wages for new staffers and retirement age.

"The best news would be if Canada Post wanted to sit down and bargain an agreement. Nobody wants to go on strike," Ray said.

One thing that has helped the Brechins is Val Figluzzi and the others with the Kids With Cancer Society, which helps families dealing with childhood cancer, from diagnosis on. The sunny skies did nothing to brighten the mood of those present at the legislature yesterday.

Disgruntled parents, teachers and students gathered at the grounds to voice their concerns about upcoming cuts to education funding, and to urge people to write to their local MLAs and sign a circulating petition.

"We want to make sure that our teachers are supported and that students are supported so that they can succeed in our schools," said Edmonton Public School Board trustee Sarah Hoffman.

1,000<sup>The</sup> Alberta Teaches Association estimates 1,000 positions will be lost in the next school year provincially.

The rally, organized by the Holyrood School Council, was attended by hundreds who held signs warning of coliseum-sized classrooms with only one teacher.

The Edmonton Public School Board presented a proposed budget last week, which includes cutting 229 teaching positions and 115 non-teaching ones.

The Catholic board is expected to hand down its budget June 14.

"This is the same thing they have done day in and day out, year after year after year," NDP MLA Rachel Notley said. "It's going to hurt our kids, that's what it's going to come down to. It's going to hurt our future."

Liberal MLA Hugh MacDonald places the blame squarely on the shoulders of the current government.

"Small class sizes do make a difference," he said. "I scratch my head almost weekly on where we are spending our money."

News in brief

JOHN ULAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleanup begins in Slave Lake

STENCH. Workers in Slave Lake were dealing with up to 4,000 stinky refrigerators that were dumped by residents who returned this past weekend. Waste services manager Tom Moore says many were full of food that's been rotting since the town was evacuated two weeks ago.

The job requires more than just gathering the fridges with a truck and pushing them into a hole. First, the coolant has to be drained. Then backhoes are used to tip the units over so the stinky contents fall out and can be buried. The fridges are rinsed out with fire hoses, then baled for shipping to Edmonton to be recycled.

"To be honest, the smell has been not that bad at all," Moore said. "Maybe it's because I work in waste all the time and am used to it."

► U.S. President Barack Obama views damage from the tornado that devastated Joplin, Mo., with residents yesterday.

Obama tours twister-ravaged Joplin

U.S. President Barack Obama pivoted from diplomacy on the world stage to the intimate and delicate domestic task of acting as healer-in-chief as he came to Joplin, Mo., yesterday to tour the devastation wrought by a monster tornado.

Air Force One swept over a massive swath of brown as far as the eye could see — a landscape of flattened houses and stripped trees on its approach.

Obama returned Saturday from a six-day European tour of Ireland, Britain, France and Poland.

He was visiting survivors and the bereaved from the worst tornado in decades, which tore through Joplin a week ago leaving more than 130 dead and hundreds more injured. At least 40 remain unaccounted for, and the damage is massive.

Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon greeted Obama on the tarmac before they set out for their first stop, a walking tour of a destroyed neighbourhood. A memorial service later was punctuating a day of remembrance and toil as authorities pressed on with the tasks of poking through wreckage and identifying the dead.

After touring destroyed neighbourhoods in the city of 50,000 in southwestern Missouri, he took time to speak at the memorial service being held by local clergy and Nixon. He offered federal assistance as well as his own condolences.

Such moments can help define a president, but habitually even-tempered Obama is more apt to offer handshakes and hugs than tears and deep emotion.

PMO denies border talk

► Leaders did not discuss 1967 boundaries, spokesman says amid glowing Israeli report ► Harper sidesteps questions on the issue at G8 summit

Prime Minister Stephen Harper did not discuss the G8 summit with his Israeli counterpart, Benjamin Netanyahu, a Harper spokesman says.

The statement by Dimritri Soudas, Harper's communications director, appears to contradict a report in the Israeli newspaper Haaretz that Netanyahu phoned Harper before the summit to ask him to block G8 support for a Palestinian state based on 1967 borders.

Soudas said yesterday in an email to The Canadian Press that Harper did speak to "various leaders in the last few days, including the Israeli prime minister as well as the head of the Arab League."

But he added "there was no G8 discussion with Prime Minister Netanyahu."

"The PM's views are long-standing and well known on the Middle East process towards a two-state solution," Soudas said while Harper was visiting Greece after the G8 summit in France.

"Canadian policy on these issues is long-standing. It's important that any statement on the Middle East always have balanced references to the various positions and the G8 statement is a balanced statement."

In a speech this month, U.S. President Barack Obama said talks between the Palestinians and Israel should be based on 1967 borders that existed before the Six Day War in which Israel occupied East Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza.

Haaretz said Israel was particularly concerned about the border proposal because at least seven of the eight G8 countries supported including it in the summit declaration.

The G8's final declaration issued Friday did not include any mention of borders in Israel-Palestine peace talks.

The Haaretz report said Netanyahu told Harper that mentioning the border issue would be detrimental to Israeli interests and a reward to the Palestinians.

As the summit concluded, media reports cited diplomats in saying the 1967 border proposal was omitted from the G8 statement because of objections from Canada.

Malta votes 'yes' to divorce

► Nation has long Catholic traditions, church's influence on citizens is still significant ► Turnout stood at around 72 per cent, low by Maltese standards

Malta — a tiny, staunchly Catholic Mediterranean island — has voted in favour of legalizing divorce, according to the results of a referendum.

Malta is the last remaining European Union nation that bans divorce. But what had been billed as a historic referendum has ushered in a "new Malta," according to a leading politician.

Yesterday's final results of the polling the day before showed that 52.67 per cent of people voted in favour of divorce, according to the Times of Malta.

Prime Minister Lawrence Gonzi, who had campaigned against divorce, said parliament would respect the will of the people in the nonbinding referendum and work on legislation to legalize divorce.

"Even though the result is not what I wished for, now it is our duty to see that the will of the majority is respected," Gonzi said in a televised speech reported by the newspaper.

The issue has been hotly debated and allegiances went beyond party lines.

"This is a conservative society, but Maltese still live like Europeans. This regularizes their lives," said analyst Saviour Balzan, whose newspaper, Malta Today, had campaigned in favour of the legalization of divorce. "It gives a new life-line to hundreds of people."

Balzan also said the "yes" victory makes Malta more European.

"Divorce is not an obligation for a member state, but it brings us closer to Europe," he told The Associated Press.

Investors await Bank of Canada rate decision

► RBC Dominion Securities last week predicted a quarter-point hike in July to 12 per cent ► Holding off on rate hikes a risk for economy, says OECD

The Canadian dollar could be under additional pressure on commodity markets this week after the Bank of Canada delivers its next announcement on interest rates tomorrow.

The dollar moved lower for a fourth week last week, reflecting slowing economic conditions, particularly in the U.S., and doubt about when the Bank of Canada will resume raising interest rates.

No one expects the central bank to hike its key rate tomorrow but traders will be anxious to read the bank's statement for clues as to when it will move the rate above one per cent, where it has been since September.

"We don't really even look for talk about imminent rate hikes next week," said BMO Capital Markets deputy chief economist Doug Porter.

Naval port plans on ice

THE CANADIAN PRESS HANDOUT

► HMCS Goose Bay moored at the future site of the Nanisivik Naval Facility, during Operation Nanook, on August 2010.

Environmental and funding concerns are adding years to the construction of an Arctic naval port considered crucial to enforcing Canadian control of the Northwest Passage.

The Nanisivik port in Nunavut was originally supposed to be at least partially up and running by next summer, following a promise made by Prime Minister Stephen Harper in 2007.

But no construction is planned for this summer and defence officials admit that the refuelling station, intended to give the navy a permanent presence at the eastern gate of the contested passage, won't be operating for years.

"Construction work at the Nanisivik Naval Facility will begin in 2013," said a defence department spokesman in an email. "It is forecasted that the (facility) will be operational in 2016."

Deadly veggie outbreak spreads across Europe

MARIUS ROEBER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spanish vegetables suspected of contamination with a potentially deadly bacteria are being recalled from stores in Austria and the Czech Republic to prevent the spread of a deadly outbreak, officials said yesterday.

The death toll from the bacteria rose to at least 10 people, and hundreds across Europe have been sickened.

Czech authorities said 120 organic Spanish cucumbers were being pulled off shelves while their counterparts in neighbouring Austria announced that "small amounts" of cucumbers, as well as tomatoes and eggplants, were being removed from 33 stores.

The Austrian Agency for Health and Food Safety said it was informed by a European Union warning system that two German companies had issued an immediate recall and sales ban of cucumbers, tomatoes and eggplants they had

PayPal alleges Google stole Wallet

Google Inc.'s ambitious plan to supplant credit cards with smartphones has thrust the Internet search leader into a legal tussle with online payment pioneer PayPal, which contends Google stole its ideas by hiring away two key executives.

PayPal painted a picture of betrayal and corporate espionage in a lawsuit filed in a California state court, shortly after the unveiling of the "Google Wallet" payment service in New York on Thursday.

The 28-page complaint alleges the service evolved from research that eBay Inc.'s PayPal had been working on for the past decade.

PayPal fingers two central culprits in the intellectual heist — one of its former executives, Osama Bedier, and former eBay executive Stephanie Tilenus.

In its response Friday, Google contends it merely identified talented candidates to run its mobile payments service and then made them offers that proved too tempting to refuse.

NOT ALL HEROES ARE BUILT OF THE SAME CLOTH

URBAN COMPASS

TERENCE HARDING
METRO EDMONTON

There are many heroes among us in this city, but most of us don't know who they are and what they have done.

One such hero is Bill Trofimuk. He is currently in an extended care facility waiting to celebrate his 90th birthday. If he hadn't fallen and hurt his hip, he would probably be out tooling around the city the way he has done for decades. But the odds on him being able to do that again are slim to none, and he will probably end up in a facility until it is time for him to shuffle off this mortal coil.

So what makes Bill a hero? Did he save children from a burning building? No. Did he discover some life-saving vaccine? No.

What he did was something all too few of us do. He gave the people of this city something that is the rarest of gifts these days — his time.

"It doesn't take much for any of us to write a cheque or to sponsor a walker or rider and let someone else do the good work. But Bill (Trofimuk) is different. He believes that it is not what you think or feel that matters, but what you do. And that is why, over the years, he has ... helped out any way he can."

It doesn't take much for any of us to write a cheque or to sponsor a walker or rider and let someone else do the good work. But Bill is different. He believes that it is not what you think or feel that matters, but what you do. And that is why, over the years, he has worked innumerable bingos and casinos and helped out any way he can.

Bill is a proud Shriner and member of ACT. The Shriner's work with children's hospitals is well-known. If you have ever been to Rundle Park, you may have seen the ACT designation on the aquatic centre there. ACT is a fraternal, non-profit organization that raises funds to support charities that enhance the lives of people with disabilities in northern Alberta.

Bill is just one of those guys who stepped up to the plate every time he was asked to do so. He has asked me to deliver a message about him when his time comes to leave this plane of existence, and I will do that gladly.

But all of us wonder what people will say about us when we pass on. I want him to know what I will say. I will say Bill was my hero. His indefatigable energy and commitment to community humbled me. Bill wasn't just a talker; he was a doer. I will also ask this question: Which one of us will replace Bill now that he is gone?

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C.

Archaeologists recovered the first anchor from what's believed to be the wreck of the pirate Blackbeard's flagship off the North Carolina coast Friday, a move that might change plans about how to save the rest of the almost 300-year-old artifacts from the central part of the ship.

Divers had planned to recover the second-largest artifact on what's believed to be the Queen Anne's Revenge but discovered it was too well-attached to other items in the ballast pile, said project manager Mark Wilde-Ramsing. Instead, they pulled up another anchor that is the third-largest artifact and likely was the typical anchor for the ship.

Apparently, pirates had everyday anchors and special anchors just as the rest of us have everyday dishes and good china.

In 1717, Blackbeard captured a French slave ship and renamed it Queen Anne's Revenge. Blackbeard, whose real name was widely believed to be Edward Teach or Thatch, settled in Bath, N.C., and received a governor's pardon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Case of mummy smuggling wrapped up

The shipping label said the mailed package contained replicas of Peruvian ceramics. An X-ray machine used by customs agents discovered it really held three skulls and a mummy more than 2,000 years old.

Authorities said Friday the package was intercepted at Argentina's central post office, and an Argentine citizen who was waiting for the shipment has been detained as part of an investigation into illegal trading in ancient cultural artifacts.

Officials speculated the package would have been relayed to a museum or a private collector in Europe, where such old bones are in demand because of the blankets and other woven material that surround ancient South American mummies.

A preliminary evaluation by Argentina's national archaeology institute determined the bones are from the pre-Inca Paracas culture on Peru's coast, and date from between the 7th and 3rd centuries BC, officials said.

Last year, Bolivian police foiled a similar mummy mailing enterprise and detained a woman who tried to send a Peruvian mummy to France.

Can X-Men live up to title of a First Class superhero film?

► Opening this week, X-Men: First Class is the prequel to an extremely successful franchise

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

It's curious that while Hollywood seems to be making less movies in general, we are entering a summer that features no less than four big-budget superhero blockbusters — including this Friday's release of X-Men: First Class.

"It's probably down to the fact that maybe less people are going to the cinema and so they make films that are large in scale where you would want to go see it on a big screen," offered star Michael Fassbender recently from New York.

"Genres take hold and they run for a while — I would say that's one of the reasons (superhero movies hold up)."

It probably doesn't hurt that X-Men: First Class is also the prequel to a very successful franchise that began as pulp fiction in 1963.

The beginning of the saga, X-Men: First Class features the original mutant superheroes and how the once-upright Magneto

Magneto

Erik Lehnsherr discovered his power of magnetism under terrible circumstances and sets his sights on revenge with his mutant ability.

(Fassbender) turned against his friend Charles Xavier (James McAvoy).

"There's such an incredible history there," said McAvoy of the franchise's legacy.

"But the main thing that runs through all the X-Men saga — whether it's the comic books, cartoon-form or movies — is that sense of the outsider being the character that you're exploring ... that has to be one reason why it's stuck around for so long."

The previous films surely added fans to the franchise as well.

However, McAvoy and Fassbender weren't intimidated by expectations of portraying the respective roles that Ian McKellan and Patrick Stewart defined in the movies.

"I definitely watched the films," said Fassbender.

"I was going to study Ian McKellan, perhaps as a young man and his movements, nuances, voice and then decided not to do that and just use the source material available in the comic books — to just take a totally fresh look at it, wipe the slate clean and go for something new."

Kate, shmate: TV heavyweights eye Pippa Middleton

► First she had a facebook page dedicated to her derrière ► Now the likes of Barbara Walters and Oprah want Kate Middleton's sis to rock American TV

After making a splash at her sister's royal wedding last month, Pippa Middleton is apparently in high demand — especially among U.S. TV heavyweights like Barbara Walters.

"Years ago, when Kate broke up with Prince William briefly, Barbara tried to hire her as a View co-host," a source tells the National Enquirer.

"But now she thinks Pippa's so sassy, young and gorgeous, she'd be a fantastic fit. Ratings would be amazing!"

But Walters isn't the only one with her eyes on Middleton, as Oprah Winfrey "wants Pippa to host her own show for her OWN network," according to the source.

"O knows it would be a great ratings coup because Pippa's a star on fire — and Americans are so obsessed with the royals." ● METRO

Winehouse hits the bottle

Amy Winehouse is back in rehab, but according to the Sun, she had something of a whirlwind morning in London before checking in.

The tracksuit-clad singer was first spotted downing a small bottle of vodka at a shop counter.

"She seemed out of

it. She was stumbling about, slurring her words," a source says.

"I was shocked to see her buy vodka so early in the day, and even more shocked to see her knock it straight back."

Winehouse then reportedly headed to a hair salon and demanded to use the restroom, only to emerge minutes later saying, "I just puked all over your bathroom," according to an eyewitness.

Winehouse's spokesman insists the singer did not throw up and that the comment was meant only as a joke.

Inventions we wish existed

► As a parent, you often think, I have a good idea! Here are some of our own (some tongue-in-cheek) with input from Mike Drummond, editor of Investors Digest, about their viability

The Dummy Dispenser

What it does: Hanging from the crib like a giant Pez dispenser, this invention distributes pacifiers when the baby needs one — automatically. If the baby is too young to grab the dummy herself, a robot arm, covered in kid-friendly foam material, extends and places it gently in her mouth. Says Drummond: “I suspect Pavlov would love this little number. It encourages motor skills and links desires and behaviour, assuming the dispenser responds to baby cries. I’d want the robotic arm to pull double-duty, and pick up discarded pacifiers.”

The Snuzzie

What it does: An electronic muzzle device, the Snuzzie turns a child's cries into classical music — or whatever sound you wish, via downloadable MP3s. Future versions will be able to identify what your child wants from each cry — food, a diaper change, a nap. Says Drummond: “Finally a product that addresses the most annoying consumer group — babies! In all honesty, this is a product for the narcissistic sadist — which happens to cover a large market segment, given the popularity of botox, stiletto high heels and the Kardashians. Let's stick with pacifiers.”

The Inflatable Stroller

What it does: Small enough to fit in your pocket, this product inflates, with the press of a button, to a full sized stroller, made of extremely durable plastic. Says Drummond: “I can get behind this product, having been behind far too many stroller-pushing parents at airport security checkpoints. This seems like a win-win-win for all concerned. The parent/caregiver gets convenience; the baby gets something airy to ride in; and I don't have to wait forever for the stroller to get folded up and shoved through airport X-ray machines.”

The Self-Cleaning Floor

What it does: An invisible seal covering your hardwood floors (especially the area where your child eats), the Self-Cleaning Floor breaks down and absorbs fallen food particles in seconds, leaving no mess behind. Says Drummond: “Again, an invention I could get behind. And we're already seeing a close cousin of this type of technology being developed in the field of nano medical technology — tiny robots that eat cancer cells and such. But what does this do to the five-second rule?”

The PoolArm

What it does: Embedded into each diaper, the PoolArm reads your baby's body chemistry and lets you know, via a digital readout, if she's done pooping or if there's more to come. Says Drummond: “Normally I'm for anything that lessens the risk of coming into contact with feces. But unless you're just really into changing diapers, I don't see this as a huge seller. That said, the right amount of fear-based marketing could motivate consumers and scare the crap out of the diaper competition.”

We would all cringe at the sight of unsold food from shops and restaurant tossed into roadside skips, but how would you react to unwanted food being served in a restaurant for a hungry lunchtime clientele?

This is exactly the business of FoodCycle, a London-based charity that turns surplus food from retailers into hearty budget meals.

They run a community café in Haringey, north

London, which is abuzz with residents and moms pushing prams come lunchtime, feasting upon dishes of unused food produce donated by local supermarkets.

The fruit and vegetables they get are a day or two past the shops' sell-by date.

Resold meat or fish is off the menu "for safety reasons," café manager Jessica Veltman says.

Every year 1.4 million tons of food are wasted by U.K. retailers while 11.9 million tons is thrown out by households, says WRAP, the government recycling body.

Can I work from home?

► Tough it out and talk to your boss about the occasional telecommute

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

In a summer when petrol prices push $5-a-pint, and subways cards scalp for the same price as baseball tickets, just about every working stiff agrees on the benefits of telecommuting except one: your boss.

Talking the office naysayer into allowing the occasional telecommute can require exhausting acts of persuasion, career counsellors say.

"It really is about convincing the boss," warns Tory Johnson, co-author of

Will Work From Home.

To accomplish that, she adds, you'll have to come with a well-prepared pitch. Keep the following tips in mind.

Start with a Short Term Try-Out

Don't approach your boss requesting a permanent change of scenery, Johnson cautions.

"It's a lot easier if you are initially focused on a trial period," she says.

Plus, Career Builder.com career coach Alison Nawoj adds, that will afford you the opportunity to prove yourself.

"Your boss may have concerns that you don't have good self-discipline," she says.

"This is a chance to convince them you're a self-starter."

Ask Not What Telecommuting Can Do For You

"Whatever benefits you come up with should center on how this can help your employer, not how it can help you," Nawoj offers. Those benefits abound, Johnson adds.

"For example, if you have a two hour commute, be willing to give up half that commute time just to start working earlier," she says.

Show that You've Thought it Through

"Recognize that the onus, at least in the beginning, is really going to be on you," Johnson says. "Do you have the right equipment? Do you have space in your home where you can make this work? Do some research first."

A guide to giving back

► You've been thinking about volunteering ► But where to begin?

Volunteering is a great way to give back to the community, try new things and gain valuable experience. But for many young Canadians, it's difficult to know where to start. Rick Ashbee, national executive director for The Duke of Edinburgh's Award, offers some tips and advice for young Canadians interested in making a difference.

thing that's a fit for you.

Look around you

One of the best ways to get started with volunteering is by finding opportunities in your own community. Chances are, there's an opportunity for you to volunteer your time right in your own backyard where you get the added benefit of seeing the impact in your own community.

Find your passion

There are so many different ways that you can get involved in the community it can be difficult to know where to start. As a first step think about things you like to do or something new that you'd like to try, and do some research to find out what's out there. Volunteer opportunities come in all shapes and sizes so keep an open mind to find some-

Be creative

If you see an opportunity to initiate a new project or want to volunteer with a particular organization, look into it. There are always new ways to have an impact and you may find that it's a great opportunity to take the lead with something that hasn't been done before.

NEWS CANADA

► Make sure to ask your friends if they know of a great place to do volunteer work.

A boss' defence

- "I really think you have to be here."
- "If you know this is the reaction your boss is going to have," Johnson says, "you need to say 'Out of sight does not necessarily mean out of mind. I'll have to be more proactive about keeping everyone in the loop.'"
- "What if something comes up?"

- "You need to say, 'I will be flexible,'" Johnson recommends. "Then, demonstrating that flexibility is going to be important."
- "If I say yes to you, I'm going to have to say yes to everyone."
- "That's often a big one," Johnson notes. "Investigate. Is there any company policy around this issue?"

So the young one is back in the nest

► As students return from school for the summer, parents brace for piles of laundry and some late, late nights

After nine months away, campus and the place where college students grew up may seem like worlds apart.

Summer at home – so often eagerly awaited by the students, their parents and siblings – is often a mixed-up time of happy reunions, unexpected challenges and weird new family dynamics as not-quite adult kids return temporarily to the nest.

"They have a whole new world, filled with new friends and new ideas, new independence," and that sometimes clashes with things back home, said psychologist Karen Levin Coburn, a consultant at Washington University in St. Louis and author of Letting Go: A Parent's Guide to Understanding the College Years.

Cindy Jez, a 55-year-old real estate manager in Richmond, Va., has gone through these transition summers several times with her two oldest boys, a junior and senior in college.

"I remember crying when they first went to college. Now I'm crying when they come home," she jokes.

Don't get her wrong – Jez loves having the boys back home. And yet, she also knows their return means piles of dirty laundry, a perennially lost TV remote, a disconnected security alarm to accommodate their late nights out.

"The first time they come back there's always an adjustment period," Jez said. They're used to the freedom of college life, and "there are still boundaries at home."

"I try not to be a nag. I try to recognize that they're young adults," she says of sons Nolan, 20, and Cory, 22. "They need to have their own sense of responsibility. At the same time, I find myself constantly doing reminders. I'll send them texts: Picked up eight pairs of filthy socks in the family room last night."

"It's a balancing act," Jez said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Timeless wisdom

Karen Levin Coburn's book, Letting Go: A Parent's Guide to Understanding the College Years, was first printed in 1988.

► Families should discuss expectations soon after their students arrive back home – things like curfews, household chores, family dinners, and spending money, so everyone is on the same page, Coburn said.

Move mountains

► How a tragic family circumstance inspired this CP24 host to reach out to others by reaching for the top

TURNING POINT

TERESA KRUIZE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

When asked to scale the tallest mountain in Africa to improve the quality of life for children struggling with mental illness, Bryce Wylde only had to think for second. "I'll do it," he said. "Count me in."

Wylde is well known as one of Canada's leading authorities on alternative medicine, for his weekly television show on CP24 and his guest appearances on Dr. Oz.

But he had never spoken publicly about a subject that is close to his heart.

"My family has been riddled with mental health issues," Bryce admits. He watched his late father struggle his whole life and it left a lasting impact on how Bryce looks at life and health.

Climbing Mt. Kilimanjaro is very challenging and I ask him what he'll be feeling the day he reaches the top. Will it be personal fulfillment, excitement and accomplishment?

Bryce grows silent and his eyes slowly fill with tears.

"That day I'll be thinking about my Dad," he says emotionally, "and the hope that other children will never have to go through what he did."

On the health-care horizon

► An aging population, growing immigrant communities and advances in computer science are creating new career opportunities in health care

KIM ZARZOUR
FOR METRO

If you have a mind for science and a heart for caring, the future looks full of promise. Thanks to changing demographics — an aging population and increased immigration — those interested in a career in health sciences have a wealth of options.

"The future is bright because there is always going to be a job in health care," says Dr. Jacques Bradwejn, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Ottawa. As Canadians grow older and the population becomes more diversified, he says, the field is ripe with opportunity.

Home health care

Research shows people recover faster in their own homes, and a growing number of careers will revolve around providing that home-based care.

In fact, experts are predicting hospitals will become places of training rather than treatment, and homes will be the place where the bulk of care is received, says Aleksandra Zecevic, who teaches aging and health at the University of Western Ontario.

Community health services

Integrated care will become key, creating a need for new disciplines such as geriatric rehabilitation aides with skill sets such as nutrition, physiotherapy and occupational therapy.

And there will be more collaboration between health professionals, says Doug Angus, director of the PhD Program in Population Health at University of Ottawa. Physicians, dietitians, physiotherapists and chiropractors will need to work together in family health-care teams and community health practices.

Gerontology

There will be a growing need for health-care providers who specialize in the elderly — from doctors of geriatric medicine, to gerontology-focused nurses and social workers — through programs like Grant MacEwan University in Edmonton, which offers a distance certificate program in Post-Basic Nursing Practice, and UBC's Okanagan campus two-year Bachelor of Social Work Aging Specialization.

Holistic health

A growing immigrant population will bring more opportunities. With different backgrounds come different requirements. One example, Angus says, is Vancouver General Hospital, which deals with a large Asian population and is combining Eastern and Western approaches to medicine. Mainstream health science programs, like that at University of Western Ontario, now expose undergrads to alternative approaches in health care as well.

Disease management

With immigration and globalization, there's a growing need for professionals who can tackle emerging infectious diseases — think SARS and H1N1. Other diseases, like TB, are re-emerging and providing new challenges because they are drug resistant. There's a demand for epidemiologists and other professionals who can monitor the growth of viruses and bacteria, predict how populations might evolve and plan for pandemic preparedness.

Technology

The fields of engineering and computer science will also play a role. Imagine a world where your "smart home" has toilets that automatically analyze urine to inform your fridge what nutrients you need, or monitors that let you know by your heart rate to alter the room temperature.

Diversity

The diversity of Canada's population will continue to increase significantly during the next two decades, especially within certain census metropolitan areas.

► Between now and 2031, the foreign-born population of Canada could increase approximately four times faster than the rest of the population. By 2031, between 25 and 28 per cent of the population could be foreign-born.

Thinking outside the box

► By bringing new ideas, Gillis has helped take Canucks to Cup final

From the day Mike Gillis was hired as general manager of the Vancouver Canucks, he's done things differently.

The status quo isn't good enough for Gillis. He believes just because something has worked in the past, it doesn't mean it can't be improved.

In his three years in Vancouver, Gillis has ruffled feathers and his ideas have been mocked. But with the Canucks preparing to play the Boston Bruins in the franchise's first Stanley Cup final in 17 years it's hard to argue with the results.

"We've tried to be as scientific in the approach of developing and interacting with players as we could be," Gillis said while watching a recent Canuck practice from the stands at Rogers Arena.

"I have no idea how much that has influenced the outcome. I think there is some influence for sure."

Gillis talks about the plan he devised for the Canucks. He won't give specific details of the plan, but points at the team on the ice as its product.

"We had a plan that we stuck to no matter what was going on around us, no matter what the speculation was around us," Gillis said.

"We knew we were going to have a good team. We didn't know if we were going to be able to add parts that would

Off the ice

Some of Mike Gillis's off-ice innovations have raised eyebrows.

► A sleep doctor advises players on when they should nap and even helps determine who should room together on the road.

► Gillis has tinkered with the travel schedule, having the team stay overnight after some road games instead of immediately flying home.

make us a really good team. When those parts began to occur, we got progressively better."

The Stanley Cup final begins Wednesday at Rogers Arena. Game 2 will be Saturday.

Gillis and his staff have managed to work within the confines of the NHL salary cap to build a Canuck team full of skill and deep in talent.

Goaltender Roberto Luongo was signed to a 12-year, $64-million US deal. It was a contract that satisfied Luongo while counting as a $5.33-million hit on the Canuck books each year.

Gillis convinced other players like Daniel and Henrik Sedin, Alex Burrows and Ryan Kesler to re-sign for less money than what they might have gotten from other teams.

Crash decides Indy 500

Dan Wheldon was zipping toward the final corner of yesterday's Indianapolis 500, surely figuring the best he could do was another runner-up finish.

Then he came upon JR Hildebrand's crumpled car, all smashed up and sliding along the wall.

The rookie had made the ultimate mistake with his very last turn of the wheel, and Wheldon, not Hildebrand, made an improbable turn into Victory Lane.

2.1 JR Hildebrand was leading by almost four seconds before his crash. His battered car slid across the finish line 2.1 seconds behind Dan Wheldon.

"It's obviously unfortunate, but that's Indianapolis," said Wheldon, who won Indy in 2005 and finished second the last two years. "That's why it's the greatest spectacle in racing. You never know what's going to happen."

In his first event of the year, Wheldon captured the ultimate IndyCar prize. But the 100th anniversary of the Indy 500 will be remembered more for the guy who let it slip away.
